

To whom it may concern:

I work for the head of a film production company, Bonneville Worldwide Entertainment. We recently experienced a major office move, which involved highly eccentric television movie producers and other film development executives.

We used NorthStar Moving Corporation to move office furniture, computers and handle other tasks involving fragile office decorations. Three young men showed up promptly at the appointed hour, dressed in uniform and equipped with proper tools and supplies. They comported themselves with quiet dignity, and did a very professional job. I highly recommend this company.

Sincerely,
